Evangelization and Discipleship

Father Thomas was ordained to the Arlington Diocese of Virginia in 2012 and has served in priestly parish ministry for eight years. For the last 20 years Father Thomas has worked in forming lay men and women in the art of discipleship and evangelization. Prior to ordination Father Thomas worked for many years as a missionary around the world, in Africa, various Caribbean islands, and was sent for FOCUS Ministries to be a campus missionary at Massachusetts at UMass Amherst. He has specialized in forming young lay people in both street evangelization and forming disciples in our Catholic Faith. Since ordination he has used those same charisms for evangelizing broken marriages and training hundreds of teens, college age youth, parents and grandparents to share in the new evangelization by successfully inviting their family members and friends to come back to, or come into the Catholic Faith. Father Thomas is also a friend and colleague of Neal Lozano and runs a diocesan wide outreach in Unbound ministry.

How do you strike up conversations with people so that you can share the gospel message? As a seminarian, Fr. Thomas Cavanaugh felt called to learn how to evangelize, so he and his professor at Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Dr. John Love, organized a "New Evangelization Club." It's purpose was to learn how to engage students on college campuses. The mission trips were so successful that other seminaries have organized similar endeavors. This book tells their story and offers practical "how-to" guidelines on how to win friends for Christ. Lively and engaging!
